

What is literacy? Is it just reading or does it involve more? Such as being able to use the knowledge as a function of success? What is the relationship between literacy and poverty? Literacy and crime? What role does it play in the overall well-being of a community?

Edison State Darke County Campus Fundamentals of Communication students will explore this critical topic and what it means to a community and the individuals who live in it. They will offer suggestions that could help make a difference.

The presentation is at the Greenville Public Library and is open to all ages. Students will be available to answer questions following the presentation. Light refreshments will be served.
